

Tuflex manufacturing joins the Graham Spray Equipment family

DOUGLASVILLE, GA - Tuflex, an industry leader in manufacturing quality fiberglass tanks, has joined forces with Graham Spray Equipment. Tuflex has long been the premier tank supplier for Graham Spray Equipment rigs. The move came after Tom Sayward, the owner and previous president of Tuflex, retired. Tom's daughter, Erika Michajlyszyn, and other Tuflex employees have joined Graham at their location in Douglasville, Ga. "I'm thrilled to have Tuflex join the Graham family to continue to provide tanks for their customers," says Josh Bare, president of Graham and Tuflex.

"Dick Bare, who owns Graham, was first to come to mind to carry on the business and the legacy built by Tuflex," says Sayward. The long-standing synergy and trust between the two brands made for a seamlessly organic transition. "Because of Graham's stellar reputation, I had great confidence that our brand's quality and customer service would be in good hands. It was very important to have my daughter Erika involved to continue the legacy," explains Sayward.

"I am very proud we were able to work in concert with Graham. It is a perfect fit to serve our green industry,"

One of our most popular tanks, the 600HX.

says Sayward. Graham and Tuflex each have a long history of success and a loyal customer base, which make them a perfect fit. "We at Graham and Tuflex see a bright future ahead as we continue to provide world-class customer service and the highest quality tanks and spray equipment for our customers," says Bare. An updated website that reflects the new partnership is in development.
